

REMARKS

In response to the examiner's comments, all previous claims have been cancelled and 21 new claims added. A patent attorney assisted solely in reformatting the application to conform with 37 CFR 1.121.

The Examiner rejected all claims over Rich et al. Rich et al deals with agent technology, especially the process of conversing with an agent. For example, a user may interact with a computer program to search the web for flights based on certain criteria and report back whenever a flight meets the criteria. The invention has nothing to do with agent technology. The invention deals with a method to assist a participant to subdivide a whole work product into subdivisions. These subdivisions enable a variety of collaborative functionality identified in the patent. The following table addresses the major issues of the reviewer and the corresponding action taken.

Reviewer's Issue	Corresponding Action
1) Application in single space	1) Application is now double-spaced.
2) Use of the words, "providing a means."	2) Removed.
3) Confusion over the use of the word, "agent." For example, the reviewer's reference to Rich et al col. 4 lines 14-20: Rich is dealing with agent technology.	3) The word, "agent," was used in the invention to mean any participant. To avoid any confusion, all use of the word, "agent," has been removed.
4) Apparent interpretation of the word, "segment," to mean activity, task, or subtask. For example, see the reviewer's	4) The word, "segment," was used in this invention to mean a division and further subdivision of the whole work

reference to Rich et al last line of the abstract and col.5 lines 14-20: Rich uses segment to refer to a sequence of actions or part of a conversation that can be replayed. Rich speaks about achieving a goal/task and subdividing it into separate tasks. Subtasks in Rich et al are separate activities that need to be accomplished to achieve a goal.	product/artifact, such as a document, spreadsheet, diagram, etc., until it can not be further subdivided. To avoid any confusion, all use of the word, "segment," has been removed and replaced with the word, "subdivision." In addition, to use consistent terminology throughout, where it added to the readability, the word, "section," was removed and replaced with the word, "subdivision." For example, where the word, "section," was part of a command or on a figure it was not changed to the word, "subdivision." In addition a few grammatical errors were corrected to enhance readability only. No new matter has been added.
